ARCHITECTURAL NOTES:

The central part of one-and-a-half storey Mount Nebo rises to two full storeys in height, thereby giving the house an unusual appearance. The guest room and stair hall have been merely built on the roof. A two storey porch with thin Doric and Ionic columns and a sunburst pediment lend a Greek Revival air to the main façade. The base of the house is brick, with stucco scored to appear like stone. Outside on each gable end stand double chimneys. A fifth chimney rises from the guest room and makes off center an otherwise symmetrical composition. The windows of the dormers and gables are foliated.
